ON HISTORICAL COMMUNICATION AND MEDIA SCIENCES
medien & zeit 2/2023

Editors: Erik Koenen (Bremen), Christina Krakovsky (Wien),
Mike Meißner (Fribourg), Hendrik Michael (Bamberg)
Guest Editor: Anna Wagner (Bielefeld)

In 2023, the Open Issue invites you to contribute articles in German or English from the whole range of historical communication and media sciences. Articles can present scientific results as well as discuss methodological and theoretical questions and concepts of historical communication science. The submitted article has to be an initial publication, not published or designated to be published elsewhere. After being checked for formal criteria and an initial examination of the content, each submission to the Open Issue is put through peer review process.

Exemplary subject areas for individual analyses, case studies or overarching approaches are:

- History of communication studies
- Methods and theories of communication history
- History and development of individual media and media genres (e.g., radio, television, photography, online media, music media)
- History of journalism (institutions, formats, genres, individuals)
- History of communication and media policy (institutions, processes, persons)
- History of media production and reception
- History of media technologies
- Change of public spheres

Submissions are welcome in English or German. Submitted extended abstracts (max. 10,000 characters including spaces, excluding notes and references, and a descriptive title in an Open Office or MS Word file) outlining a prospective contribution will be reviewed by the editors and the guest editor of the issue. On this basis, authors will be invited to submit full papers (max. 7,000 words including title, abstract, keywords, tables, figures, and bibliography). All full papers will be peer-reviewed. In a possible revision phase after the peer review, authors can extend the length of the article to a maximum of 8,000 words, taking into account the suggestions of the reviewers and editors. medien & zeit is fully open access and does not charge its authors any fees for editing the articles.

Submission of extended abstracts: March 31, 2023

Recommendation for acceptance or rejection in principle: by the end of April 2023.

Submission of Full Papers: July 31, 2023

Publication of issue: earliest in issue 2 of 2023
